Felons Convicted of Murder, Attempted Murder, Robbery, Other Crimes

A jury yesterday found the last defendant of a home invasion robbery guilty of murder, the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office announced.

Deputy District Attorney Greg Cernok said the jury convicted Hector Aguilar Arciga, 39, of first-degree murder, four counts of home invasion robbery and first-degree burglary.

On April 11, a jury convicted two additional defendants in the same case. Pedro Huerta Zuniga, 44, was found guilty of first-degree murder, attempted murder, assault with a semiautomatic firearm, possession of a firearm by a felon, four counts of home invasion robbery and first-degree burglary.

Francisco Argenis Parra, 32, was convicted of first-degree murder, attempted murder, assault with a semiautomatic firearm, four counts of home invasion robbery and first-degree burglary.

The three defendants are scheduled to be sentenced June 6 at the Los Angeles County Superior Court in Norwalk before Judge John A. Torribio. They face a maximum sentence of life in state prison without the possibility of parole.

Cernok said on April 22, 2009 the three defendants went to a Bellflower apartment to purchase drugs from the victim, Carlos Zarate, 23. When Zarate realized he was being cheated out of money, the three men shot him, the prosecutor said. Zarate was later discovered by authorities and pronounced dead at the scene.

During the murder investigation, detectives learned there were three other people in the apartment who witnessed the fatal shooting. They also were robbed, including one who was shot. The victims testified in court and identified the defendants as the assailants.

Furthermore, fingerprints found at the murder scene linked Zuniga and Parra to the killing. Additionally, a gun found in Parra's car connected him to the incident, the prosecutor said.

The prosecutor argued during trial that the defendants were part of a “drug rip-off crew.” They would establish trust with a dealer by purchasing a small amount of drugs. They then would request a large quantity and rob the drug dealers using semi-automatic handguns, zip ties, and in some cases security badges. The defendants also would use stacks of one dollar bills with a larger bill on the outside to make it appear as if the proper amount of money was brought to the location.

The case was investigated by the Los Angeles County Sheriff’s Department.
